Perennials grow for more than one year but flower for a shorter duration than annuals. Some perennials are short-lived but spread by seed or underground by root so that you may not even notice the death of the original plant.

SUN VS. SHADE AND EVERYTHING IN BETWEEN

Planting the right plant for your garden sunlight conditions is essential for success. Shade plants will burn up in sun, and sun-loving plants will simply wither in shade. This list is divided into sun and shade. Please refer to plant tags and the website for more detailed information on plant sunlight needs.

- sun 8 hours or more direct sunlight
- part to full sun 4 hours or more direct sunlight
- part sun/afternoon shade (eastern exposure) 4 hours or less direct sunlight, morning sun only
- part sun/afternoon sun (western exposure) 4 to 6 hours of direct sun per day, including some afternoon sun
- part to full shade 4 hours or less sunlight
- full shade (northern exposure)
- sun and shade tolerant some plants can do it all!

WATER

Perennial garden beds will establish best with about 2 inches of water one to three times per week depending on conditions*. Use an oscillating sprinkler or soaker hose.
